“ Brenda, you were our second Mama. You and Ms. Oma made us feel safe and comfortable every time we were with y'all. You stepped up in a way that some mothers don't. You'll go down in history as the lady who could iron with her hands. Mama always admired your ability to pack a suitcase better going out than it came in. Our summers were remembered by a beautiful amethyst or pink ice ring. Sometimes a bag of sifted gold was placed on top of Granny's China cabinet as a keepsake of our times mining the hills of Tennessee by your side for hours. You made sure that our girl needs were met even if you were flawlessly naturally beautiful and didn't need mascara. I don't know why you hid that from the camera like you did. We will only wish we had those memories caught on tape. Well, at least we have your voice and laughter.. because it was contagious. Your meticulous manner will go unforgotten, and so will your ability to love us like your own. Brenda, please tell mama we love and miss her. And please know that you left an equally amazing void. I promise to take care of Daddy, but I can't promise to fill your precious shoes. I love you so much. Rest now.
